Neo found us when he was a puppy. He was neglected and, guessing from his cowering nature, possibly abused. He was pathetic. He was underweight, covered in fleas, had worms and so many mites the vet couldn't see in his ears. We got him fixed up and nurtured him back to health. We already had a house full of pets but we decided to rescue Neo and he has been a great part of our family for the past 7 years.

Last year began a downward spiral of negative circumstances that pretty much covers all the severely stressful life events and now we have to give up our baby Neenie. We would love to keep him but the one thing I couldn't stand is to see him neglected again and I certainly would never want to be the person who was neglectful. I cannot provide him a steady home or food or the basic vet care he needs and I feel it is better to find him a good home than to try and keep him and have him get loose or not be cared for or go hungry.

People have asked me how I can give up a 7 year old dog and I tell you, it's not easy and it's not something I want to do. The most important thing to me is that Neo is happy, cared for and loved. The best I can do is 1 or possibly 2 out of 3 which just isn't enough. I promised my sons that I would do all I can to find Neo a good home. Please help save a good and sweet dog with a lot of love left give.

If he has a fault, it that he can be a messy dog. After bath day he is almost always the first one to be dirty again. It's all part of his charm though as he comes toward the door with mud on his paw he wags his tail and gives you that innocent and sad look as is to say "please don't be mad at me".

Neo grew up around lots of pets and kids and is very comfortable with both. He is kinda a sissy dog and often gets bullied by our Pug even though Neo is three times his size. He is of course house trained and very obedient. He is dog who lives to please and craves your approval and love. If you talk to him in just the right way, he'll "talk" back to you (happy moans not barking).

Neo is healthy, neutered and just got his shots on 6/27/09. He has been taking HeartGuard his whole life and has Frontline Plus for flea protection.
